Competition Brief

A very exciting opportunity is presented to architecture professionals and students worldwide for your work to be showcased in an international documentary film, alongside some of the greatest living architects of our current time.

We are seeking examples of architectural projects which exemplify the use of advanced and dynamic digital techniques in the process of analysis, design exploration and final outcome of a design work.

One or a combination of several computer-based tools must have been implemented in the processes of data collection/ information processing, simulation and development about the project and be evident in early stages of the design as well as the final work. We are looking for contemporary, cutting edge uses of computer technology to present as ideas in a documentary film.

Submitted work should demonstrate a strong research based attitude in design i.e. more than aesthetics. Your work may be a complex scheme, a building, or an element and combinations examining main architectural features, for example a wall element, roof or fenestration, or the synergy of these elements with the ground, the landscape and the building. Submissions may be a past university project, an experimental project, or from your place of work (with approval from the company director).
