

Architecture is a reflection of the time in which it is created, and of the values of the society that produces it. Thomas Bryens

Trentini Talk Show

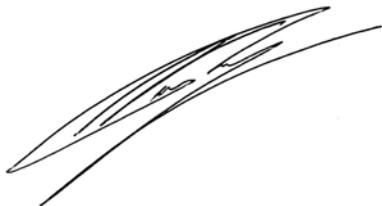

The mission of Trentini is to help create a modern and high-quality environment in close cooperation with architects and designers practicing in Latvia. This spring, with the building of the new showroom, we are also planning to organise more frequent events that will help extend participants' professional knowledge in various fields. One of the planned activities is launching a talk show for architects Trentini Talk Show. The first season of the show will be hosted by Vēsma Kontere McQuillan, a professor from Kristiania University College in Oslo, Norway. Given the current social distancing measures, the first season will take place virtually.

Every week, an internationally recognised professional in their field will be invited to discuss current topics in architecture and design. The first episode of the show will be Isolation: a Time For Reinvention, where together with Vēsma various topics will be discussed, namely the current situation in Oslo, the question of the architect's identity in the digital age, and her book, Fashion Spaces. A Theoretical View, published by Frame Publisher.

The second episode, Global versus Local, will feature Germans Ermičs, a Latvian designer practicing in the Netherlands. The main language of the show is English, but the first two episodes will be held in Latvian.

We believe that a constant pursuit of new knowledge, an exchange of experience with professionals of the field and with one's contemporaries, discussions and heated debates (sometimes even disputes!) and a search for something new all promote growth and development that benefit everyone towards our goal - a high-quality, aesthetic environment.

The first season of the Trentini Talk Show will consist of eight episodes, and we will be keen to share the main findings of every one of them with the general public.
