

CALL FOR ENTRY

The Next 100 Years Project – Architect Edition

It's the year 2020. It's the year COVID-19 became a global pandemic. How will it reshape our civilization?

COVID-19. We're on the front end of this thing. It won't be days or weeks. It'll be months or years. When we emerge from this worldwide catastrophe, everything will be different.

We decided that we need relief from the harsh reality of this catastrophe. More importantly, we need big, dreamy, hopeful ideas that will help us navigate the future. To do this, we need to exercise the sum total of our imaginations. That's why we created this project.

With The Next 100 Years Project – Architect Edition, we invite architects to speculate on the built environment after the pandemic. More specifically, we ask them to submit an image and an essay that describes their vision for the future. Then an expert panel of judges will select the best 100 entries for a digital book of the project. If selected, your page in the book will feature your image, your essay, your headshot, and a brief bio. It will also include the option to hear you read your essay out loud.

There will be no charge to submit an entry. There will be no charge to view the book when it's completed. Deadline for entries is June 28, 2020. Notification will occur on or before July 31, 2020.

ABOUT the AUTHOR

The Next 100 Years Project is the brainchild of Wells Mason. He's a designer and sculptor. He's also a community activist with a history of impossible-sounding community projects. With The Next 100 Years Project, Mason created an online community project filled with heart to serve the world.

www.next100yearsproject.com

THE NEXT 100
YEARS
PROJECT